Homicide Drops off List Of Top Causes of Death

For the first time in almost half a century, homicide has fallen off the list of the nation's top 15 causes of death, bumped by a lung illness that often develops in elderly people who have choked on their food, according to the 2010 list released Wednesday by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Rivals Blast Romney's Practices

Front-runner assailed for his record at the helm of Bain Capital

Washington

What gives? Some of Mitt Romney's rivals are waging a fierce attack that you'd never think would come from the mouths of Republicans who claim Ronald Reagan as their hero. They're blasting the GOP front-runner for aggressive, wealth-creating business tactics.

The criticism, from Newt Gingrich and Rick Perry, didn't seem to matter much in New Hampshire, where Romney claimed a comfortable primary victory Tuesday. Jon Huntsman came in a distant third, Gingrich was fourth, and Perry was sixth. Huntsman said Wednesday it's time for Republicans to stop attacking Romney's role in a corporate-takeover firm, but he said there are plenty of government-related issues on which to criticize the front-runner.

The sniping may have more resonance in next-in-line South Carolina, which is far more economically depressed, and in Florida. Both states are struggling with high joblessness rates and weak housing markets. South Carolina's primary is Jan. 21, Florida's is Jan. 31.

Trying to tap into populist sentiment, Gingrich and the others are accusing Romney of being a fat-cat venture capitalist during his days running the private equity firm Bain Capital, laying off workers as he restructured companies and filled his own pockets.

To hear such accusations now from Republicans — historically the party of business and free enterprise — is particularly notable.

"It's like watching dogs walk on their hind feet. It's not impossible, but it certainly looks odd when you see it," said economist Bruce Bartlett, who worked in the Republican administrations of Reagan and George H.W. Bush.

Romney has shrugged off the fusillade. "We understood for a long time that the Obama people would come after free enterprise," he told reporters as he flew from New Hampshire to South Carolina on Wednesday. "We're a little surprised to see Newt Gingrich as the first witness for the prosecution."

Study: Planets Outnumber Stars

Washington

The more astronomers look for other worlds, the more they find that it's a crowded and crazy cosmos. They think planets easily outnumber stars in our galaxy and they're even finding them in the strangest of places. And they've only begun to count.

Three studies released Wednesday, in the journal Nature and at the American Astronomical Society's conference in Austin, Texas, demonstrate an extrasolar real estate boom. One of those studies shows that in our Milky Way, most stars have planets. And because there are a lot of stars in our galaxy — about 100 billion — that means a lot of planets.

"We're awash in planets where "Planets are ... extremely common. More common than we ever imagined. That's a really good sign if you are searching for life beyond Earth."

— WILLIAM WELSH, SAN DIEGO STATE UNIVERSITY ASTRONOMY PROFESSOR, WHO WROTE A STUDY ABOUT PLANETS WITH TWO STARS FOR THE JOURNAL NATURE.

17 years ago we weren't even sure there were planets," said Harvard University astronomer Lisa Kaltenegger, including planets that mirror "Star Wars" Luke Skywalker's home planet with twin suns. Kaltenegger wasn't involved in the new research.

Astronomers are finding other worlds using three techniques and peering through telescopes in space and on the ground. Confirmed planets outside our solar system — called exoplanets — now number more than 700, and still-to-be-confirmed ones are in the thousands.

NASA's new Kepler planet-hunting telescope in space is discovering exoplanets that are in a zone friendly to life and detecting planets as small as Earth or even tinier. That's moving the field of looking for some kind of life outside Earth from science fiction toward just plain science. SETH BORENSTEIN (AP)

U.S.: No Role in Iranian's Death

Latest assassination of a nuclear scientist inflames tensions

Tehran, Iran

It seemed a clockwork killing: Motorcycle riders flashed by and attached a magnetic bomb onto a car carrying a nuclear scientist working at Iran's main uranium enrichment facility. By the time the blast tore apart the silver Peugeot, the bike was blocks away, weaving through Tehran traffic after what Iran calls the latest strike in an escalating covert war.

The Wednesday attack — which killed the scientist and fatally wounded his driver — was at least the fourth targeted hit against a member of Iran's nuclear brain trust in two years. Tehran quickly blamed Israeli-linked agents backed by the U.S. and Britain.

Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton denied any U.S. role in the slaying, and the Obama administration condemned the attack. However, provocative hints from Jerusalem reinforced the perception of a clandestine campaign to set

A Familiar Scene

Wednesday's assassination in Tehran, which officials are shown above investigating, came on the same day as the third anniversary of the killing of another scientist, Massoud Ali Mohammadi, and bore strong resemblance to earlier attacks on nuclear scientists. Iranian officials have blamed the U.S. and its allies for the previous killings of scientists. Two similar attacks in November 2010 killed one scientist, Majid Shahriari, and wounded another, Fereydoon Abbasi. In July 2011, motorcycle-riding gunmen killed Darioush Rezaeinejad, an electronics student. Other reports identified him as a scientist involved in suspected Iranian attempts to make nuclear weapons. back Iran's nuclear ambitions.

The day before the attack, Israeli military chief Lt. Gen. Benny Gantz was quoted as telling a parliamentary panel that 2012 would be a "critical year" for Iran — in part because of "things that happen to it unnaturally."

The blast killed Mostafa Ahmadi Roshan, 32, a chemistry expert and a director of the Natanz uranium enrichment facility, the centerpiece of Iran's expanding program to make nuclear fuel.

The U.S. and its allies are pressuring Iran to halt uranium enrichment, a key element of the nuclear program that the West suspects is aimed at producing atomic weapons.

Iran denies it is trying to make nuclear weapons.

The years of virtual stalemate between Iran and the West appear to be shifting into a new period of heightened tensions. Tehran has accused Israel's Mossad, the CIA and Britain's spy agency of engaging in an underground "terrorism" campaign against nuclear-related targets, charges the three nations deny. Pakistani PM Fires Defense Chief as Crisis Grows

Islamabad

Pakistani Prime Minister Yousuf Reza Gilani fired his defense secretary Wednesday in a dispute over an unsigned memo sent to Washington that enraged the army, escalating the country's political crisis.

The army warned darkly of "grievous consequences" as a result of the standoff, which is hampering U.S. efforts to rebuild ties needed to negotiate an end to the war in Afghanistan. The country is struggling amid economic turmoil and an al-Qaeda-fueled insurgency.

The developments were a sign of near-open conflict between the army, which has often seized power. Relations between President Asif Ali Zardari and the generals have never been good, but have soured dramatically in recent months.

Acting under army pressure, the Supreme Court ordered a probe to establish whether the memo had been sanctioned by Zardari, a prospect that could lead to impeachment hearings. (AP)

Many Haitians who were displaced by the Jan. 12, 2010, earthquake are still living in tent camps like this one near Port-au-Prince, seen on Tuesday.

A Slow Transition

Almost a million people have moved out of Haiti's increasingly dangerous tent cities. Some were pushed, but most were pulled away by programs that gave them rent subsidies or assistance to repair a home. Still, 500,000 people remain living under tarps. About 20,000 still live in a squalid camp in downtown Port-au-Prince, their once-crisp tents, stamped USAID, now soiled gray and sagging in the heat. Canada's minister of international cooperation, Beverley Oda, on Wednesday said her government will help Haiti move people who have been camped outside the collapsed National Palace to homes north of the capital. (TWP/AP)

Fledgling Rebirth for Haiti

Two years after a devastating quake, signs of stability and progress emerge

Port-au-Prince, Haiti

Hope here is measured in bags of cement. Progress is a city park without a tent. The future is a bus that takes children to school without charge. Its destination above the driver's window reads: "Digit-nity."

In Haiti, two years after the worst natural disaster in a generation, made worse by a paralyzing political crisis and a cholera epidemic that exploded in 2010, advances in Haiti are visible everywhere, even if they are sometimes hard to see: the neighborhood that a year ago was lit by yellow candles now strung with electric light; the road once blocked by earthquake rubble now snarled with morning traffic.

Work crews are planting brave little palm trees on the road to the airport. The cell phone carrier is building a Marriott hotel. The

The portion of the pledged funds for Haiti's reconstruction that donor nations have dispersed so far, according to the U.N. special envoy to Haiti. Of the $4.5 billion promised, $2.3 billion has been delivered. The United States is among those slow to cut checks: About $2.2 billion of the $3.1 billion committed by Washington has been dispersed. But U.S. diplomats say they will catch up in 2012. (TWP)

South Koreans, lured by generous subsidies and tax breaks, are coming to make shirts and pants, and employ 20,000 people, the single largest jobs program in Haiti in 30 years.

"Recovery is here. It is painfully slow, it is agonizing to watch, but it is recovery," said Paul Farmer, the Harvard doctor who has spent three decades in Haiti and whose group, Partners in Health, is opening a modern, 320-bed public teaching hospital an hour north of the capital.

Progress may be coming to the poorest country in the hemisphere, but it is not coming easily.

A year ago, to get anything done in Haiti, supplicants sat in frustrating meetings with foreign aid bureaucrats at the U.N. logistics base. Now they sit in frustrating meetings with the three-month-old government of Haiti — led by the irrepressible President Michel Martelly, a political neophyte and former carnival singer once known as "Sweet Mickey," who is learning on the job.

The government is functional after a lost year that included a presidential election plagued by fraud, a chaotic runoff and a months-long brawl in parliament over the approval of a new prime minister.

"We have been able to keep hope high and show people that things are changing," Martelly said. "You can see where there were camps everywhere, now you can see kids playing in those parks. Life is coming back to normal."

The international aid group Oxfam has witnessed some progress in Haiti but declared this week that reconstruction has proceeded "at a snail's pace."

There is plenty of blame to spread around. The previous administration was notoriously ineffective, and donors were slow to give money to the government during a year of political chaos.

The magnitude-7 earthquake that destroyed wide swaths of the city on Jan. 12, 2010, left behind 10 million cubic meters of rubble, enough to fill a line of dump trucks stretching from Key West to Bangor. Half the rubble remains where it fell, and the rebuilding of downtown has barely begun.

"Debris is unfortunately not a very sexy intervention for the donor community," Prime Minister Garry Conille said in an interview. "Our friends in the international community would prefer to build a hospital or a school."

WILLIAM BOOTH (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Metro's New Benefit System

Q How will the reduction of the monthly allowance for the federal pretax benefit from $230 to $125 per month on Jan. 1 affect WMATA's ridership and its future fare policies? A fare increase combined with a loss in the benefit means a double hit for many commuters.

Metro GM Richard Sarles and Carol Kissal, Metro's chief financial officer, said the reduction in the federal transit benefit had no effect on the budget proposal or on Metro's ridership projections. Sarles said he's hopeful that Congress will again raise the transit benefit so that it's comparable to the benefit for parking.

Dr. Gridlock offers commuter counseling online at washingtonpost.com.

Q Why does it take so much time to repair or replace escalators inside and outside of the Metrorail stations? Does Metro do rail maintenance during off-hours on weekends? Can Metro do its maintenance between midnight and 6 a.m. so it won't effect rail service?

Metro does maintenance around the clock, seven days a week. Weekend riders are all too familiar with the scheduling of maintenance — even to the point of closing stations, as will happen this weekend. Over the past year, the maintenance program for tracks, trains, escalators and elevators has gotten more aggressive.

Q It seems that in many large organizations, the board plays a significant role in long-term planning and capital projects/maintenance. How involved is the Metro board in such decisions, and how long have most members been on the board?

The board has gone through a tremendous turnover during the past year. Few of the current board members were around for the last fare increase in 2010, and few have had the chance as yet to participate in much long-term planning. There is a lot of talent on Metro's board but also a lot of uncertainty about how deeply involved board members should be in decision-making.

Q Regarding parking at Metro lots, why can't users who don't ride trains pay a graduated charge based on time in the garage?

Metro shouldn't be in the parking business in the first place. The transit authority, the largest provider of parking in the D.C. region, should be focused on providing transit rides. That job clearly is tough enough. Metro is in the parking business to provide itself with customers, commuters who drive to the stations and park there all day while they are at work. The current system was designed to be as simple and inexpensive as possible for Metro to operate. It was created when the transit authority eliminated the staffed booths at the exits, following a scandal over disappearing receipts.

Q When do you expect to operate the system under automatic train control, and what, if any, new real-time technology, as the National Transportation Safety Board suggested, will be installed to mitigate the possibility of another 2009 accident?

Sarles said Metro has no specific timetable for this. The transit authority is continuing with the replacement of the track circuitry in compliance with the NTSB recommendations. The new system will be the subject of a safety review and testing before the go-ahead is given for the return to automatic control. Sarles said that it might be possible to restore automatic control on the Red Line before the other lines, because the Red Line is the one that doesn't overlap service with other lines.

Cabbies Knock Fare Hike

Drivers say proposed rate is too low, limit on car age is unfair

Washington

There was standing room only at the D.C. Taxicab Commission meeting Wednesday, when city cabdrivers and others aired their grievances about the commission's recently approved fare hike.

More than a dozen cabdrivers spoke at the two-hour meeting, which was devoted entirely to comments from the public. Drivers said they are concerned that the per-mile rate increase is not enough and that placing an age limit on their cars is akin to "genocide," one driver said.

"This is a lethal injection to wipe us [D.C. taxicab drivers] out,"

Under the proposal, the per-mile rate riders are charged would rise to $2.16.

Mechal Chame said to raucous applause from his peers.

Under the controversial rules, approved by the commission in December, the "drop rate" — the base fare passengers are charged at the beginning of a cab ride — would remain $3, but the per-mile rate would jump from $1.50 to $2.16. This is 59 cents less than cabdrivers had requested.

The wait-time rate would increase from $15 to $25 an hour and fees for luggage, additional passengers, pets, emergency fuel surcharge and personal service would be eliminated. Additionally, a five-year age limit would phase out older, higher-mileage vehicles.

While Chairman Ron Linton has said the changes are "reasonable," the taxicab community has been vocal in its disappointment.

"Eliminating the extra fees is not a reasonable thing to do," said E.J. Chubbs, a cabdriver. "You're taking away, not giving," he told the commission.

Shahid Qureshi, another city cabdriver, objected to the age limit, calling it "ridiculous."

Although the commission will not vote again, public feedback could lead to further changes.

Behind Schedule: After repeated delays, the completion of a new Silver Spring transit hub is being pushed back again, with the opening now set for June and the cost now expected to total just over $100 million. A project more than a decade in the making, the Silver Spring Transit Center is being built next to the Metro station in downtown Silver Spring and is expected to eventually accommodate nearly 100,000 people per day. Baby Found Alone at Occupy Camp

An infant’s cries rang through the Occupy D.C. encampment in McPherson Square on Wednesday morning, and when a group went to investigate, they found a baby girl alone in a tent, wearing a onesie and mittens.

Soon after, authorities said, a man was arrested and the girl — who was unharmed — was in the city’s care.

The campers notified authorities and then cared for the girl until help arrived, according to Kelly Canavan, 36, a retired Prince George’s County school teacher who has been living at the camp.

D.C. Fire/EMS workers checked on the girl around 10:30 a.m. She was fine, according to Sgt. David Schlosser, a U.S. Park Police spokesman, and is now with the District’s child protective services department.

About 30 minutes later, Schlosser said, a man returned to the encampment and identified himself as the baby’s father. Police arrested the man, charging him with attempted second-degree cruelty to children.

Packers quarterback Aaron Rodgers runs with the ball against the New York Giants during Green Bay's 38-35 win on Dec. 4. The teams meet in the playoffs on Sunday.

Ready for a Rematch

Giants are healthy and confident as they get a second shot at the Packers

Pro Football

The New York Giants' defense wanted another shot at Aaron Rodgers and the Green Bay Packers after a last-second loss last month. They got their wish. And this time it might be a fair fight.

The last time the Giants (10-7) faced the Packers, Rodgers shredded the defense for 449 yards and four touchdowns, winning the game with a 68-yard drive in the final minute to set up a 31-yard field goal in a 38-35 decision.

That's ancient history. The Giants' defense has come light-years in five weeks. The front four is dominating, led by All-Pro Jason Pierre-Paul, with Justin Tuck finally healthy, and Osi Umenyiora recovered from an ankle injury.

The secondary is covering receivers, and opponents are being stuffed on the run. It's shutdown football, as was evident in Sunday's 24-2 win over the Atlanta Falcons in an NFC wild-card game. That set up the rematch with the Packers (15-1) at Lambeau Field on Sunday.

"We wanted to see them again, but we realized in seeing them again it would be in a playoff game like this, so, obviously, we wanted to see them again," Tuck said. "But, yeah, we felt like we let one slip through our hands."

The Giants have played five games since facing the Packers on Dec. 4, and the defense seemingly has gotten better each week. There is a theory that by playing well against the then-undefeated Packers, the Giants gained confidence.

"We didn't need that game to

Boley

Blackburn

Missing In Action

When the Giants played the Packers in the regular season, weak side linebacker Michael Boley was coming off a hamstring injury and middle linebacker Chase Blackburn had just been signed in the wake of an ankle injury to rookie Mark Herzlich. Osi Umenyiora was out of the lineup with a high-ankle sprain and Tuck, bothered by shoulder and groin injuries earlier, was dealing with an ankle problem. While the line was able to sack Aaron Rodgers twice, there was never consistent pressure, and it allowed the All-Pro quarterback to pick and choose his receivers on a day he was 28 of 45 and connected with eight targets. Rodgers finished with 449 yards, and Green Bay eked out a 38-35 win in a thriller. (AP) understand that," safety Antrel Rolle said. "We understand that we are a great team; we just have been complacent all year long. Right now, we are peaking."

The Giants' line has been creating havoc for opponents in recent weeks. New York had 11 sacks in closing the season with wins over the Jets and Cowboys, and the Falcons' Matt Ryan looked tentative on Sunday despite being sacked only twice.

The number of points the Giants have given up in their past four games after surrendering 34 points in a three-point win over Dallas on Dec. 11. (AP)

That said, the Giants realize they need one of their best defensive games to win. And even that might not be enough with Rodgers running the Packers. "I think we played better than OK," Rolle said of the last meeting. "A lot of it is the quarterback. He is going to make his plays. It was just little things we can change in the game that can take away 21 points easily. We're aware of that, and they probably have the same mindset." (AP)

Cavs' House of Horrors

UVa. shoots for its first victory at Duke since the mid-1990s

Virginia Men's Hoops

Virginia sophomore forward Akil Mitchell was 3 years old in January 1995, so forgive him for not remembering the last time the Cavaliers claimed victory at Cameron Indoor Stadium, the storied home of Duke basketball.

Back then, Cory Alexander was a star point guard on a Virginia squad en route to the Elite Eight of the NCAA Tournament, Tony Bennett was in his final season as an NBA player, Mike Krzyzewski had back problems that kept him from coaching the game, and Boyz II Men topped the Billboard chart with "On Bended Knee."

That was 17 years and 14 Virginia losses at Cameron ago. A lot has changed in the interim, but it remains true that Duke is tough to beat on its own court. The Blue Devils will ride a 43-game home winning streak — the second-longest active streak in the NCAA — into Thursday night's game against the Cavaliers.

This year, though, Virginia (14-1, 1-0 ACC) is not considered to be overwhelmingly outmatched. The Cavaliers are experienced and confident, and ranked No. 16 in the nation. That Duke (13-2, 1-0) is ranked No. 8 concerns them, but not to the same degree it did in seasons past.

"We're not going there thinking we're the underdog," fifth-year senior forward Mike Scott said. "We're going there to try to get a win."

In the Cavaliers' 76-60 loss at Duke last season, Virginia held a nine-point lead with 16 minutes to play before the Blue Devils went on a run and won by 16.

To break their 17-year drought at Cameron, the Cavaliers' defense and maturity must be stable enough to avoid another second-half meltdown.

For the first time in awhile, that's viewed as a viable possibility.

STEVE YANDA (THE WASHINGTON POST)

United Draft Primer

D.C. United has had a pretty dormant off-season, despite its need to fill roster holes in hopes of ending the club's four-year postseason drought. D.C.'s biggest needs — striker, central midfield and left back — coincide with the strengths at the top of this year's draft class. With just one pick (barring trades) in Thursday's two-round MLS SuperDraft (noon, ESPN2), though, United will have to make it count. Here are three players D.C. should have its eye on when pick No. 7 rolls around. AVI CREDITOR

1 Casey Townsend, F, Maryland. Local ties aside, Townsend is as productive a finisher as there is in the draft class (43 goals in four years), and D.C. needs production up top, especially with Charlie Davies not returning after his loan stint.

2 Enzo Martinez, M, North Carolina. D.C. is blessed with strong wing play but lacks a long-term solution in the center to bring it all together. The answer could be Martinez, a silky, technical, accurate passer who helped steer UNC to the 2011 national championship.

3 Tyler Polak, D, Creighton. The consensus-best left back in the draft, Polak has a U.S. youth national team pedigree and would give United an attack-minded option at the position, something that was lacking in 2011.

AUSTRALIAN ARTISTS Claire Healy and Sean Cordeiro are making their U.S. debut at the Corcoran Gallery of Art with the installation show "Are We There Yet?" The exhibition's focal point is a shuttle-like area featuring a model of a slumped-over astronaut surrounded by junk food. The snacks — all of which are real and were bought by the artists at a suburban Costco — include Coke and cheese balls, and represent the number of calories the typical American would consume on a journey to Mars and back (3,800 calories per day for a total of 1,976,000). In a second space hang pieces from the series "Where We've Been, Where We're Going, Why," which is inspired by space exploration — and made entirely of Legos.

What inspired this work?

CORDEIRO: We were in D.C. for five days, and that allowed us a good time to see the Smithsonian, to see Air and Space. I think in a sense it is a site-specific work.

Specific to D.C. or to the U.S.?

CORDEIRO: Well, I think it was inspired by visiting Washington, but our work often works on universal experiences.

HEALY: You don't have to be American to understand the work.

You bought all the materials at Costco. Did you pick anything up just because it was a great deal?

HEALY: We originally went because we were on this hunt for massive amounts of drawing pens.

TONY BROWN

Claire Healy & Sean Cordeiro

CREATORS OF 'ARE WE THERE YET?'

"All of our work deals with the use of the everyday."

CORDEIRO: All of our work deals with the use of the everyday. Our work does involve consumer culture. I guess going to a place like Costco is kind of an obvious choice.

In using Legos, did you ever step on one of them while barefoot?

CORDEIRO AND HEALY: [simultaneously] YES.

CORDEIRO: I remember as a kid falling asleep with Legos in my bed and rolling over on them. That was a painful sensation.

HEALY: A lot of them end up in the vacuum, too. KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY (EXPRESS)

After 17 years, D.C.'s Thievery Corporation is still making beats and packing the clubs

Music

The first time Rob Garza and Eric Hilton met, it was musical amore.

"We immediately connected, talking about the music we loved, shared a few drinks," Garza recalls about meeting his Thievery Corporation cohort in May 1995. "Eric had just opened up [swank Dupont Circle nightclub] Eighteenth Street Lounge with his partners, and I walked in there with a mutual friend and really fell in love with the place and the music."

A week later, the fast friends recorded their first songs together, including Thievery's debut cut, "The Glass Bead Game." Seventeen years later, their partnership is still strong and prolific, one of the few dub-heavy chill-out projects that has continued to thrive in D.C. and beyond even as interest in that scene has waxed and waned.

Part of the duo's ability to survive is that the two basically agree to not disagree. "They're not strong disagreements," Garza says. "If both of us are really into something, then we'll take it further. Otherwise, if one of us isn't into it, there's no sense developing it."

They've also stayed independent, releasing the band's music on their own Eighteenth Street Lounge label. On ESL, Thievery's created six studio albums, umpteen remixes and, most recently, the "Live at the 9:30 Club" DVD, which docu-Eric Hilton, left, and Rob Garza formed Thievery Corporation in 1995 and also run the Eighteenth Street Lounge record label.

"If both of us are really into something, then we'll take it further. Otherwise, if one of us isn't into it, there's no sense developing it."

— ROB GARZA OF LONGTIME LOCAL DJ DUO AND GENRE-BUSTING RECORDING GROUP THIEVERY CORPORATION.

ments the group's five-night run there in January 2010.

"It's become a tradition," Garza says of the multi-night shows at 9:30. "We don't do it every year, but it's our hometown, and the shows are great and filled with hometown love." Thievery will likely be playing 9:30 Club again in 2015 to celebrate 20 years together, says Garza. It's an idea he marvels at.

"It's really bizarre. When we started it, we had no idea we'd be able to sell records in general," he says. "I remember we printed a thousand CDs, and that week [a distributor in] Germany bought them all and ordered another 2,000. And we've never looked back since."

Preaching as Performance Art

Reverend Billy invites you to join the Church of Stop Shopping

Books

Reverend Billy has hair so high it practically touches heaven. He wears a white suit and a collar that marks him as a man of God. Reverend Billy is not afraid to holler at you, because Reverend Billy is trying to tell you about the devil.

Bill Talen, 53, invented Billy 12 years ago as a parody of late-night TV megapreachers with Elvis hair and their eyes on your money. "One impulse I had was to appropriate the abuse of the relationship to Jesus that was being shown," he explains.

The San Francisco-based theater producer was inspired by the way conservative pundits such as Rush Limbaugh twisted liberal politics into caricature — seen in Limbaugh's obsession with "feminazis," for example. "[Limbaugh] appropriated a classic progressive character" — feminists — to demonize for his own agenda, says Talen, "but that was rarely done in the other direction." That's where the Reverend, whose most apt mainstream analog might be Stephen Colbert's faux conservative persona, came in.

Now Talen and his wife, Savitri D, lead the Church of Stop Shopping, a group of about 100 activists who demonstrate at malls and give public performances with gospel music and sermons. Billy uses evangelical jargon to preach that consumerism has possessed our culture and we should drive that demon out. The church is the subject of the 2007

Bill Talen leads a public protest/performance art event as Reverend Billy.

"If we have a good show, people for the first 20 or 30 minutes will just be in a free fall."

documentary "What Would Jesus Buy?" and of Talen's recent book, "The Reverend Billy Project" ($23, University of Michigan Press), which he and Savitri will discuss Thursday night at Busboys and Poets.

Shows are part worship service, political rally and performance art. "If we have a good show," Talen says, "people for the first 20 or 30 minutes will just be in a free fall, having this raw, unmediated experience."

The Church was present on the first day of the Occupy Wall Street movement in New York's Zuccotti Park on Sept. 17. "The institutions, the corporations, the logos were not there. We were discovering new ways to be together," Talen says. During the Occupy protests, Talen was arrested in front of Goldman Sachs and spent 30 hours in the Manhattan Detention Complex.

To Talen, Reverend Billy may be a satiric continuation of the tradition of oration and preaching in America. But the message is real. Sometimes even Reverend Billy is real.

"Billy [was going] to the deathbed of a friend of ours," Savitri says. "As he was leaving, he turned to me and said, 'Should I wear my collar?' And he put his collar on and he went." FIONA ZUBLIN (EXPRESS)

Get your motor running at the International Motorcycle Show

Imagine the feel of the open road, the thrill of a thrumming exhaust — and the ability to use the HOV lanes any time you want. The International Motorcycle Show will showcase the latest and greatest two-wheeled wonders this weekend, along with seminars and a stunt show from the Smage Brothers (of “America’s Got Talent”). But if you don’t have a bike, choosing one can be a bit of a muddle. We talked to experts on three different brands.

IF YOU ARE: Someone who doesn't like to dust YOU WANT: A BMW

“We have a saying,” says Bob Henig, owner of Bob’s BMW Motorcycles in Jessup, Md. “‘Chrome don’t get you home.’ BMWs have a more durable, permanent finish, so they require less upkeep.” But Henig recognizes that no bike can be all things to all people. “If the one you’re on is the one you’re having fun on, that’s the one that’s right for you.”

IF YOU ARE: The type who talks with strangers on Metro YOU WANT: A Harley-Davidson

Jennifer Stipkala, general manager of Harley-Davidson of Washington in Fort Washington, Md., says part of the hog’s popularity is the social aspect. “If I pull up to a gas station and we both have a Harley, we’re definitely having a conversation,” she says. But there’s more to it than talk: “We’re coming up on our 110th anniversary,” Stipkala says. “A motorcycle company doesn’t stay in business that long unless people love it.”

IF YOU ARE: The kind who accepts everyone YOU WANT: A Honda

Angel Earles, general manager of the Motorcycle Factory in Woodbridge, Va., says that Honda riders tend to be more ecumenical when it comes to riding with owners of other bikes — even at the “Honda Hoot” rally, a national gathering of Honda aficionados. “I went to Tennessee when they had a Honda Hoot,” Earles says. “My dad had a Honda, my mom had a Yamaha, and I had a Katana, but the rides were for anybody.”

Scenes From a (Famous) Marriage

New York Times writer Jodi Kantor delves into the Obamas’ family life

Books

Jodi Kantor’s “The Obamas” ($30, Little, Brown and Company) was embargoed until Jan. 10. That didn’t stop politics junkies from buzzing about it weeks in advance. Kantor, a New York Times correspondent, began covering Barack Obama’s campaign in 2007, and in 2009 interviewed the president and first lady Michelle Obama in the Oval Office. Kantor conducted further research for the book through interviews with 33 former and current White House aides, and many of the couple’s friends (the Obamas declined her requests for additional interviews).

What was it like conducting an interview in the Oval Office?

It was extremely intense. One of the themes of the book is adjustment and how people adjust to a place as unusual as the White House. And the Oval Office is a particularly hard place to adjust to. You walk in and there’s sort of sensory overload because you have the living, breathing president and the first lady, and you’ve also got John F. Kennedy’s desk and Gilbert Stuart’s portrait of George Washington.

New York Times reporter Jodi Kantor has covered the Obamas since 2007.

Have the Obamas stayed grounded since they moved into the White House? Is that even possible?

Trying to do things like regular people is sometimes not worth the effort. Also, we wouldn’t want the president and first lady to remain completely their old selves, because anyone who is just a regular person wouldn’t be able to handle the extraordinary demands and scrutiny of that job.

Why does the Obamas’ marriage matter?

I think their relationship is fundamental to who both of them are. These are two people who were born into pretty modest circumstances and moved to a totally new place in the world. And they really did that together. There’s no way the president would have ever been elected without her. Throughout his career, she has connected him to other people.

Do you think that Michelle’s fashion icon status has played a role in the presidency?

I think that, unlike her husband, she is really attuned to the power of images. Barack Obama sometimes resists the visual power of the presidency. He’s not somebody who spends a lot of time thinking about how to achieve iconic photos that will reflect his power, whereas we see again and again that Michelle Obama is really savvy about photos.

Low Budget, Big Influence

A new documentary traces the influence of Roger Corman, the godfather of B movies

Screen

Everything you need to know about B-movie king Roger Corman is contained in one scene of the new documentary "Corman's World: Exploits of a Hollywood Rebel." Corman is preparing to receive an honorary Oscar in 2009, and his wife is struggling to get his bow tie just right. "It's supposed to look imperfect," Corman says. "That's how people know you tied it by hand." This says a lot coming from a man who embraces monsters that clearly look like puppets.

"It was a great little nugget," says "Corman's World" director Alex Stapleton. "It runs completely parallel to the types of movies he makes. [We're in] an age where movies are such a digital experience — so much CGI work that it looks so perfect and there's so much money. Then you look at Roger Corman movies and they're all handmade."

"Corman's World," opening locally Friday, combines a history of Corman's work with interviews about his effect on modern film. Over the past half-century, Roger Corman is shown on the set of 1970's "Bloody Mama," just one of four movies the producer released that year.

"People underestimate how difficult it is to make genre films."

— ALEX STAPLETON, DIRECTOR OF "CORMAN'S WORLD: EXPLOITS OF A HOLLYWOOD REBEL."

Corman has produced hundreds of low-budget, somewhat schlocky flicks that include "Wild Angels," the original "Little Shop of Horrors" and, more recently, Syfy's "Sharktopus" (and "Dinoshark" and "Piranhaconda").

These "handmade" movies tend to get stuck with the misleadingly pejorative "exploitation genre" label, a shorthand way of saying there will be a lot of nudity or a lot of blood — probably both. "People underestimate how difficult it is to make genre films," Stapleton says. "You can even argue that it's harder [than a non-genre film]. Genre audiences are very particular. That's Roger's domain, and he's perfected the science of that."

Corman gave many big-time directors their start — including Martin Scorsese, Francis Ford Coppola and James Cameron. (Scorsese appears in the film, as does, in the film's most stunning moment, a tearful Jack Nicholson.) While Stapleton doesn't consider herself an alumna of the "Corman School of Film," she has audited a few classes. Growing up in the '80s, she watched dozens of Corman films on TV (without knowing who Corman was).

"When I was a teenager, I wanted to become a director but didn't have the opportunity to go to film school, so I used books and [DVD] commentaries. One of the books I picked up was Roger's autobiography. The fact that one human being was responsible for so many movies I liked and responsible for launching so many careers... The man behind all of this was Roger Corman."

film riffs

We Go Together?

"JOYFUL NOISE," out Friday, should satisfy everyone who's been waiting for Queen Latifah and Dolly Parton to FINALLY do a movie together. Here are more satisfyingly weird pairings in films. K.P.K.

1 Arnold Schwarzenegger and Danny DeVito

In 1988's "Twins," the two opposite ends of the physical spectrum play, well, twins. How? Through the wonders of Hollywood science.

2 Robert Downey Jr. and Zach Galifianakis

Tall, dark and handsome takes a road trip with furry, offbeat and cuddly in "Due Date," a comedy from 2010. It's like a vacation with Iron Man Tony Stark and Tony Stark's manic teddy bear.

3 Charlize Theron and Patton Oswalt

"Young Adult," now in theaters, uses the awkward pseudo-friendship between their characters to illustrate that beautiful people are often horrible and that Patton Oswalt can act.

4 Brad Pitt and Jonah Hill

"Moneyball" (2010) continued the "hottie/dork" tradition, pairing Hollywood's golden god with everyone's favorite curly-haired, sarcastic buddy. Who would you pick for your team?

5 Janeane Garofalo and Uma Thurman

"The Truth About Cats & Dogs" (1996) elicits laughs simply by showing the 6-foot Thurman and the 5-foot Garofalo walking down the street. They look like an adorable Chihuahua trying to keep up with a greyhound.

Aja (Zana Marjanovic) and Danijel (Goran Kostic) navigate love amid war and having too many consonants in their names.

Love, Interrupted

Quick! Name who was fighting who in the Bosnian war. If you stumbled and stammered and said something like, "Well, there were Serbians ... and something with Muslims? And they were fighting each other? Wait, which country is this?" then perhaps you should see "In the Land of Blood and Honey," opening Friday at the E Street Cinema. The film is Angelina Jolie's directorial debut (she also wrote it) and tells the story of Danijel (Goran Kostic), a Bosnian Serb, and Aja (Zana Marjanovic), a Bosnian Muslim, who start dating right before the war. When the violence begins, Danijel becomes an officer in the Bosnian Serb army — and Aja ends up his prisoner. The film does a nice job of explaining the roots of the conflict but is particularly moving when depicting (sometimes in graphic detail) the particular plight of women, who are subject to sexual crimes such as humiliation and rape. "In the Land of Blood and Honey" sometimes veers into melodrama but never oversimplifies the conflict, and the actors (particularly Vanessa Glodjo as Aja's sister Lejla) turn in tremendously moving performances. ► Landmark E Street Cinema, 555 11th St. NW; opens Fri., $8-$11; 202-452-7672, Landmarktheatres.com. The Couple That Play Together ...

... STAY TOGETHER: Brian Oblivion, left, and Madeline Follin, right, met as students at New York's New School and quickly bonded, forming the indie-pop group Cults in 2010. The couple — who are now dating — combine a retro sensibility (think the girl groups of the '60s) with a modern pop edge. On Saturday, the duo will play two shows at the Black Cat.

in the Hall of Nations starting a 5 p.m. Monday.

Music Center at Strathmore: Musical Celebration and Tribute, 4 p.m., free, tickets required.

Corcoran Gallery of Art: For their first exhibition in the United States, Australian artists Claire Healy and Sean Cordeiro will explore the aspiration of space travel with the necessity of food consumption. Working with statistics related to food, beverages and household goods, the artistic duo propose to physically illustrate what an astronaut — consuming only the goods of the “everyman” — would require on a journey to Mars. At the conclusion of the exhibition, the contents of the display will be given away, creating an event to highlight existing cycles of production, consumption and distribution, through March 11. “30 Americans,” a survey of work by African-American artists from the past 30 years, through Feb. 12. “Claire Healy and Sean Cordeiro: Are We There Yet?,” the Australian artists show how much food, calculated with statistics, it would take for an astronaut to remain well-fed during a journey to Mars, through March 11. “Strange Fruit,” an exploration of African-American identity through photographs and video works by Hank Willis Thomas, through Mon. “The Exceptional Everyday: Design Post-Process,” dynamic work by 12 contemporary Norwegian designers, Congo before and after independence; “The Evolving Universe,” see images of space taken through telescopes and explore the time between the creation of the universe to present day on Earth, 10th Street and Constitution Avenue NW; 202-633-1000, Mnh.si.edu.

National Museum of the American Indian: “A Song for the Horse Nation,” explore the relationship between Native Americans and their horses in this exhibit, which will include a life-size mannequin of a horse in full beaded regalia, rifles and a Sioux tepee, “Indi-Visible: African-Native American Lives in the Americas,” an exhibit that looks at the lives of people with African-American and Native American heritages, through Feb. 2. “Behind the Scenes: The Real Story of Quileute Wolves,” the “Twilight” series has made vampires and werewolves fodder for teenage crushes and bedroom posters worldwide. But it’s supposed Quileute lore that gives characters like Jacob Black their powers. This exhibition balances out some of the story’s more supernatural interpretations of Quileute tradition and explores the coastal Washington tribe’s wolf creation stories, crafts and artwork with objects including wolf headdresses and necklaces, opening Fri., through May 9. Fourth Street and Independence Avenue SW; 202-633-1000, Nmai.si.edu.

LAST CHANCE National Museum of Women in the Arts: “Trove: The Collection in Depth,” more than 100 pieces show the breadth of the collection the museum has assembled over a quarter-century, through Sun. “Visions of the Orient: Western Women Artists in Asia 1900ñ1940,” prints and paintings by Western female artists exploring Asian cultures in the early 20th

Pumped-Up Eats

Gourmet dining transforms gas stations into destinations

According to the rules of the road, you're never supposed to eat at the same place you gas up your car — unless you like dried-up doughnuts, withered hot dogs or nuked burritos. Luckily for hungry drivers, some local entrepreneurs are taking pump-side cuisine to a super-premium level, opening boutique restaurants inside gas stations. "At first, I thought it would be crazy to serve good food in that setting," admits Fast Gourmet co-owner Manuel Olivera. "But then I realized that people would remember that forever." One stop at these gastro stations and you'll rethink the rules. NEVIN MARTELL

R&R Taqueria

Just a few years ago, Rodrigo Albarran-Torres lost his job as a commercial pilot because of the recession. Having worked in restaurants growing up, he brainstormed with his father, a veteran of the hospitality industry, trying to land on a new career. When they heard that a local Shell station was looking to open an eatery on its premises, Albarran-Torres jumped at the opportunity. "It actually worked out great," the chef-owner says. "Instead of being unemployed, I had a new job and a new business." He designed a menu full of street snacks known as antojitos, inspired by his childhood in Mexico City. "It's food that you'll find on the streets and in the markets," he says. Refuel with an order of three tacos ($6) with creative and classic fillings, such as barbacoa (lamb), carne asada (thin-sliced steak), lengua (beef tongue) or cueritos (fried pork rinds). ● 7894 Washington Blvd., Elkridge, Md.; 410-799-0001, Rrtaqueria.com.

Spiky-haired Guy Fieri recently stopped by to film an episode of Food Network's "Diners, Drive-ins and Dives" that will air this spring.

A set of three tacos at R&R can be filled with lamb, steak and/or beef tongue.

Easy Access

You don't need to settle for a McFlurry or KFC's chocolate chip cake when you're on the go. Enjoy a tastier treat without ever leaving the car at these delicious drive-thrus.

Cheesecake Heaven

10344 Fairfax Blvd., Fairfax; 703-218-4114, Cheesecakeheaven.co.

Nine decadent cheesecakes vie for your attention here — including flavors such as Oreo-crust-ed peanut butter, and espresso-boosted pumpkin latte.

Moo Thru

11402 James Madison Hwy., Remington, Va.; 540-439-6455, Moothru.com.

Using milk from their own grass-fed cows, this boutique ice creamery handcrafts an ever-changing array of flavors, such as gingersnap, blackberry and cake batter.

Java Divas

8355 Ritchie Hwy., Pasadena, Md.; 410-353-8373, Javadivas.net.

Here motorists enjoy caffeine-spiked frozen frappes — like the Irish Cream and amaretto swirled Napoleon — made by scantily clad barista babes. N.M.

To-go containers and utensils at this eco-friendly spot are made from compostable cornstarch, and the fryer oil is recycled into biofuel.

Fast Gourmet's succulent Cuban is made with pork butt and ham.

Fast Gourmet

When you pull up at the W Express gas station in the U Street corridor, you hear Fast Gourmet before you see it. The garage-turned-eatery blasts the rock — Creedence Clearwater Revival, Metallica, Guns N' Roses, you name it. "We didn't have a sign when we first opened," Olivera explains. "The music was so people would want to know what was going on inside." It turns out that there's a lot happening, courtesy of Olivera's brother and business partner, chef Juan "Nacho" Olivera. The Uruguayan cook turns out an impressive array of sandwiches, including a hearty Black Angus beef and chorizo meatball sub ($8.50); a Cuban with pork butt and ham ($8.50); and the house specialty, the Chovito ($13), which is piled high with shaved tenderloin, mozzarella, hard-boiled eggs and much more. "We want it to be an international comfort food menu," Olivera says. "Because this neighborhood is full of a lot of different cultures."

● 1400 W St. NW; 202-448-9217, Fast-gourmet.com.

The Thai Pan

The regulars at this Leesburg, Va., favorite simply call it "Gas Station Thai." Since 2008, the restaurant has been surprising motorists who were expecting only to fill up their tanks. "When I came for a job interview, I couldn't believe it was actually a restaurant," says manager Sumitra Singhanuratt. "It just doesn't look like one from the outside." Those who venture inside are greeted by a cozy space and an impressive menu. Choose from Far Eastern favorites such as crispy duck stir-fried with hot peppers, chili-garlic sauce and basil ($17); or Bangkok Beef sautéed with scallion, onion and ginger in a brown butter sauce ($14.95). If you want a little heat in your belly when you drive off, just ask for your dish to be cooked "Thai hot."

The roadside restaurant has a nice selection of vinos and brews, including a Thai favorite, Singha beer.

Customers have lunch at Jewel of India, which is located in a discreet corner of the Hillandale Shopping Center in Silver Spring.

A Precious Pick

Jewel of India proves to be a hidden gem in a Maryland strip mall

Located in a discreet corner of Silver Spring's aged Hillandale Shopping Center, Jewel of India might be better named Hidden Jewel of India. Discovering the place for the first time feels like finding a wad of bills in an old pair of pants.

Sure, Jewel of India has a lunch buffet, but it also has an attentive wait staff, a full bar with custom cocktails (order the Shahi Jaam, with Scotch, orange juice and Indian-spiced syrup) and, most interesting of all, a separate "Indo-Chinese" menu.

The Indo-Chinese dishes are a nod to a trend that's big on the subcontinent, says general manager Vick Singh. "They do Chinese food with Indian spices," he says.

The eatery's chili paneer is made with cubes of house-pressed cheese.

You'd be hard-pressed to detect an Indian influence in the slender, crisp spring rolls, but the evidence of Indian cookery was obvious in my chili paneer with its cubes of house-pressed cheese, a substitute for the bird parts in the more common Indo-Chinese dish known as chili chicken.

Jewel of India's chef, Nabin Kumar, hails from Nepal, which might explain why I sometimes found his Indian preparations timid, whether a decidedly sweet tamarind dip or a creamy, one-dimensional tomato-based curry sauce.

Far more often, however, the chef proved that country of origin plays no role in his ability to interpret Indian dishes, particularly his wickedly complex chicken vindaloo.

If Indian desserts tend to leave you cold, try Jewel of India's house-made kulfi. The small, almost-frozen towers of Indian ice cream are infused with cardamom and topped (in my case) with crushed pistachios. Served with an artistic display of chocolate, mango and other sauces, the kulfi was the sweetest ending I've ever experienced at any Indian restaurant — including those not found in a strip mall. TIM CARMAN (THE WASHINGTON POST)

● 10151 New Hampshire Ave., Silver Spring; 301-408-2200, Jewelofindia.com.

Cheap Eats: Roti's new Virginia location (1501 Wilson Blvd., Rosslyn; 571-257-3295, Roti.com) will dish out free lunch Tuesday from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Customers who donate any amount to Adoptions Together — a local child adoption agency — during that time will get a free salad, sandwich or Mediterranean plate in exchange. The offer is limited to one free lunch per person, and each person must be present to receive the meal.

Rasika's palak chaat (crispy spinach)

Prix-Fixe Me

It seems as though every food blog I read lately is down on D.C. Restaurant Week, the infamous period of prix-fixe specials ($20.12-$35.12) offered in and around the city (through Sunday; Restaurantweekmetrodc.org).

Indeed, there are downsides: Many places offer only certain items or serve dishes that aren't typically on the menu. And the extra foot traffic can create a crazy atmosphere. I can see why it might make sense to stay away, but positive experiences keep me coming back.

When I was in grad school, the promo gave my boyfriend and me the chance to enjoy a romantic meal at 1789 (1226 36th St. NW), a place I passed daily on my way to classes that was ordinarily WAY beyond my budget.

A Restaurant Week reservation once reunited me with old friends at Oya (777 9th St. NW), where we caught up over food that, to be honest, I can't remember too clearly. The good conversation still sticks with me, though.

More recently, Restaurant Week gave me a time-sensitive, wallet-friendly reason to finally visit Rasika (633 D St. NW), where I tried Vikram Sunderam's much-lauded palak chaat. It was a revelation, one of the rare moments in my life when I've said to myself, "So THIS is what all the hype is about."

Like regular dining experiences, not all Restaurant Week meals are so momentous. But, for me, at least, they're always memorable.

The Washington Post Young Journalists Development Program (YJDP) and the Washington Association of Black Journalists present the Urban Journalism Workshop (UJW). The workshop gives high school students in the Washington area an inside look at careers in journalism. Experienced journalists from the Washington Post, the Associated Press, National Public Radio and other media companies teach UJW students the basics of newspaper, broadcast and multimedia journalism. Three scholarship awards will be presented to seniors who excel during the workshop and demonstrate strong research, reporting and writing ability. There is no fee to apply or attend.

Fast Facts:

- ✓ Workshops meet for eight consecutive Saturdays from March 3 – April 28.
- ✓ Sessions run from 9:30 a.m. – 4:00 p.m. at various sites throughout Washington, D.C.
- ✓ Scholarships will be based on an essay, stories produced in the workshop and participation in all eight sessions.
- ✓ All students attending high schools in the Washington area are encouraged to apply. Students should contact their journalism advisor or media instructor for details.
- ✓ Applications must be postmarked or delivered by Tuesday, January 17, 2012.

How do I apply?

Taken With Tabatha

A killer flu left me unable to do much besides watch TV. I landed on a marathon of "Tabatha's Salon Takeover," the Bravo reality show in which no-nonsense hairstylist Tabatha Coffey strides into flailing beauty shops and transforms them from fiasco to fantastic.

By Marc Silver

I didn't realize at the time, but this spring, the NewNowNext awards named Tabatha "Most Addictive Reality Star." How true! What makes her addictive is that she says what we all want to say to hapless co-workers — and gets away with it because she has cool hair and a slamming black wardrobe. Plus, she is always right. She is appalled by wimpiness, lateness and hooker-like garb. "I'm not a violent person," she calmly informs an uncooperative owner, "but I want to beat the living hell out of you." And she does not care WHETHER YOU GET A SMOKING BREAK!

I confessed my addiction to Tabatha when I interviewed her about her new season (Tuesdays, 10 p.m., retitled "Tabatha Takes Over" because she's not just rehabbing salons anymore). She said in her clipped Aussie accent: "As long as watching made you feel better and you didn't think about the flu, I'm happy." Me too!

Free at Last

The West Memphis 3 get a mixed-blessing epilogue in the HBO film 'Paradise Lost 3'

Television

It's been 19 years since the bodies of three 8-year-old boys were discovered naked and bound in the woods near their homes in West Memphis, Ark. A month later, three teenage boys were arrested for the murders (and charged with rape and mutilation, amid rumors of Satan worship and an interest in heavy metal). Within a year, the young men had been convicted. One of them was sentenced to death.

But you probably already know this. The circumstances and bizarre carriage of justice that swirled

Backstory

The new film ruminates in many morose ways over the passage of time and the harmfulness of set minds, while acknowledging the first two films' role in bringing attention to the case. Had it not been for "Paradise Lost," (directed by Joe Berlinger, left, and Bruce Sinofsky, right) the plight of the West Memphis 3 — including Jason Baldwin, center — might never have been adopted as a celebrity cause, attracting the moral and financial support of Johnny Depp and Eddie Vedder, among others, and the work of high-priced defense attorneys. H.S.

around the "West Memphis 3" prisoners became the stuff of outsider outrage when Joe Berlinger and Bruce Sinofsky's first documentary about the murders, "Paradise Lost: The Child Murders at Robin Hood Hills," aired on HBO in 1996.

A sequel, "Paradise Lost 2: Revelations" followed in 2000; together, both films made an increasingly compelling case that Damien Echols, Jason Baldwin and Jessie Misskelley had been wrongly tried on shoddy evidence. Moreover, the films told a deeply disturbing story about human nature, grief and mob vengeance — effectively turning the West Memphis events into a modern-day analogue to the Salem witch trials. The "Paradise Lost" films became, for lack of a better description, a cult hit.

In their riveting "Paradise Lost 3: Purgatory," premiering on HBO Thursday at 9 p.m., Berlinger and Sinofsky return to West Memphis to finish what has undeniably become a life's work. Another decade has passed. The teens have aged in prison, now approaching their 40s, while appeal after appeal was denied by the same judge who oversaw their trial.

"Paradise Lost 3" is perhaps the most interesting and well-made film of the trilogy, not only because of its mixed-blessing epilogue, in which Echols, Baldwin and Misskelley are freed from prison with an Alford plea deal in August 2011. Agreeing to the plea technically released them but leaves the case unsolved.

Though "Paradise Lost 3" bills itself as a conclusive chapter and exults in freedom for the West Memphis 3, it feels as though we haven't yet made our last trip to those haunted woods.

HANK STUEVER (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Plan Ahead: If you were hoping to see a midnight screening of "The Dark Knight Rises" in IMAX when the film opens on July 19, you might want to get in line — online. A handful of IMAX-capable theaters across the country have already started selling advance tickets to midnight showings, and, according to online ticketing service Fandango, two theaters in New York and Los Angeles have already sold out of seats for their 12:01 a.m. screenings. Not-So-Modern Family

Jokes about ethnicity and in-laws abound in the new sitcom 'Rob'

Premieres

CBS
8:30

"Rob" is not as horrible as most had feared. And that's saying a lot.

Rob Schneider plays the title character, a fussy, obsessive-compulsive landscape architect and bachelor who impulsively marries Maggie (Claudia Bassols) in Las Vegas. There's little chemistry between the two leads, who are supposed to be madly in love.

Comedy ensues when Maggie feels compelled to integrate Rob into her large Mexican-American family. Cue the ancient, lame ethnic jokes. It's a little sad to see a network comedy fumbling so awkwardly around Hispanic-American culture 60 years after Lucy married a Cuban band-leader on "I Love Lucy."

The chief tensions on "Rob" are between Rob and his in-laws, Fernando (Cheech Marin) and Rosa (Diana Maria Riva). Ethnic jokes! In-law humor! It feels about as fresh as a Dean Martin roast.

For its many faults, "Rob" is a rare comedy that actually admits that grown-ups have extended family ties, tensions, affections and responsibilities. Devoid of any discernible ethnicity, Rob is a perfect symbol of rootless contemporary TV characters. He complains about his mother's insistence that he see her "almost every Christmas."

If "Rob" survives (and it could just thrive), it's because Cheech Marin has the potential to play Archie Bunker to Rob's Meathead. Clearly aimed at a large and growing Hispanic audience, "Rob" would do well to downplay Rob and put the accent on Maggie's disapproving family.

The Missing Link

A whimsical series with a whiff of spirituality, "The Finder" (9 p.m., Fox) stars Geoff Stults, above, as Walter, a wounded veteran whose brain damage enables him, or perhaps compels him, to locate the missing. Like Walter, "The Finder" is purposefully casual to the point of ragged. With a little "Monk" and a pinch of "MacGyver," "The Finder" has the feel of a not-bad cable series and will probably find an audience to match. K.M.

Blog Log

“I mean, what would political coverage be without Buchanan frothing and foaming at the mouth as his head does a three sixty while saying something demeaning about minorities, right?”

—RIPPDEMUP.COM is not happy to see that conservative commentator Pat Buchanan is indefinitely suspended from MSNBC, after the release of his book “Suicide of a Superpower,” which some say has racist undertones.

“Laugh all you want, but his aborted presidential campaign was ultimately a success for Cain. There’s really no other way to spin it. He obviously got in to raise his name recognition, and despite the circumstances under which he bowed out, he did accomplish his initial goal.”

—AVERAGEBRO.COM thinks Herman Cain’s public speaking tour is a strong promotional move for the former presidential candidate.

“You will pardon my rather coarse descriptive of the [people] that run the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, but after reading their explanation for why their famous ‘Doomsday Clock’ has ticked a minute closer to midnight, one can only conclude they’re nothing but a bunch of gasbags.”

—PJMEDIA.COM isn’t buying the Bulletin’s reasoning concerning the clock’s change, which states in part, “The political processes in place seem wholly inadequate to meet the challenges to human existence that we confront.”

“Do we really need a gigantic store for sneakers? Well, it seems that a lot of athletic goods providers are betting on Georgetown being a new sports gear hub.”

—GEORGETOWNMETROPOLITAN.COM isn’t sure that a Nike store is a good fit for the space on M Street NW that formerly was home to a Barnes & Noble bookstore.

“We’ve noted Neville’s unexpected hotness [before], but this photo of the ‘Harry Potter’ boys kind of puts the hot nail in the hotness coffin.

—WEKNOWAWESOME.COM thinks it’s pretty clear that Neville Longbottom (played by Matthew Lewis) is the most attractive of all the boy characters in the “Harry Potter” movies.

Horoscope

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Avoid being careless at all costs; some may be able to afford a mistake at this time, but not you. Take a stand during the afternoon.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) A surprising turn of events can work to your advantage — as long as you remember what it is you're really trying to accomplish.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You may have to wait for certain signs before you can put your plans into motion. Obstacles and objections should be few.

ARIES (March 21-April 20) Don't do anything just for show; if you can't be sincere and whole-hearted, then don't do it at all — whatever it may be.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Something may be getting down to the climactic moments, and you don't want to be left standing in the wings. Are you fully prepared?

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A seeming contradiction gives meaning to the day. Put yourself in another's shoes to understand your own situation better.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You can challenge someone who is used to laying down the law, and in the process you can validate yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may be called upon to speak for another, so be sure you do not overstep your bounds and say more than is called for.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You can take care of a few obstacles with apparent ease — and no one will know just how trying this situation has been for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) A celebration of sorts is likely to mean something very different to you than it does to others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) It's time to put a plan into motion that you have been keeping under wraps for quite some time. Only one close friend knows the truth.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) What you're expecting from another is certainly not unreasonable — and yet you may be disappointed when all is said and done.

Patrick Dempsey hasn't decided whether he'll return to "Grey's Anatomy" next season, because of his car-racing hobby. "The biggest point for me in negotiations is getting time off to come race, so if I don't miss races, I'll probably stay on" the show, Dempsey said Sunday at Daytona International Speedway, where he was testing his car for an upcoming race. PAPARAZZIUnfortunately, There's No Story to Put Them Next To

The picture editor of Britain's Daily Mail newspaper says he sees up to 400 photographs of the Duchess of Cambridge's sister, Pippa Middleton, cross his desk every day. Paul Silva says Middleton typically has eight or nine photographers camped outside her door and estimated that they produce "300 to 400 pictures" of her daily. (AP)

New York City preschools issued press releases that they are happy to entirely redesign facilities to suit Blue Ivy Carter's needs.

LUXURIESThe Royal Treatment

New York health officials are investigating complaints that patients in Manhattan's Lenox Hill Hospital were mistreated while Beyoncé was there giving birth to her and Jay-Z's daughter, Blue Ivy Carter. Media reports said the couple paid $1 million to take over a floor and their security guard blocked parents from the neonatal unit for hours. The hospital has denied the reports. (AP)

Dirtbag Digest'Can I Pay in Nude Photos?'

Lindsay Lohan is facing a lien for nearly $94,000 that the federal government says she owes in unpaid taxes. Records in Los Angeles County show the lien was filed Thursday seeking payment for the 2009 tax year. A rep said Lohan's finances are personal. (AP)

Weekend Track Work

From Friday, January 13 at 10 p.m. to Monday, January 16 at closing:
Buses replace trains on the Blue and Orange Lines between L'Enfant Plaza and Eastern Market stations.

Temporarily closing stations and suspending train service is necessary while Metro installs NTSB-recommended guarded #8 switches.

From Friday, January 20 at 10 p.m. to Sunday, January 22 at closing:
Buses replace trains on the Red Line between Grosvenor-Strathmore and Bethesda stations.

Temporarily closing stations and suspending train service is necessary while Metro rehabilitates track and installs NTSB-recommended guarded #8 switches.

To get last train times for specific stations, or for information about shuttle bus service, parking and alternate routes, please visit MetroForward.com or call 202-637-7000.

Track work projects like this are part of Metro's commitment to building a better ride for you.

RED LINE ALERT:
Dupont Circle station's south entrance will close in February.
